“ Shopping words of wisdom from Babcia: Take from the back and check the date. I drew the line at smelling everything before buying but watching shoppers' eyes blow out of their heads when she would open butter and sniff it in the store always made me laugh.

Other life lessons learned include (but not limited to): wearing 5 pairs of cloth garden clothes doesn't spare you from rose thorn damage when pruning. The hole for plants was always to be deeper despite my being sure I saw the sky at the bottom end of some holes I dug. Clothesline is the best way to secure a gate. You must feed the squirrels. I never eat enough despite having to go down a belt notch...or two after visits. Anything except Vitamin D milk is foey. Old Polish women swear more than truck drivers...in Polish of course. A Whopper can also be called a double lobster with cheese (yes, she would eat all of it). "I think something wrong with..." is a precursor to something is majorly messed up and requires immediate attention.

Babcia, I love you and will miss you.
