“ Although I didn't know Taters well, I knew his heart through his sister and brother. Vianca spoke often of how close she has always been with her brother, and I know their bond and love for each other cannot be broken by death. When Jimmy was little and David would pick him up from school, you could see how they cared about each other by their greeting. Jimmy would run excitedly to him for a hug and they would walk off, happily holding hands and talking about Jimmy's day. Most other siblings would barely bother to pay attention to their kids and certainly did not show the interest and love that David always did.

I will hold in my heart the memory of a good brother, one who loved, cherished, and treasured his relationships with his siblings - the people closest to him in the world.
