A measure of a man is not how he died, but how he lived—not what he gained, but what he gave. Uncle Rich gave his time, his love, his happiness, and his sense of humor. Growing up, he was more than an uncle and a godfather—he was like a second father to me. You will be deeply missed.

I've lost a friend and a great neighbor, known the Respondi's for most of my life. Rich and Rose always were generous, after cleaning their sidewalks during the snowy season they would treat me to homemade cookies, wine and excellent cigars. I'm going to miss our chats, God Bless You
